Many Catholic schools and students face financial challenges

Tom had a deep commitment and valued Catholic school education

At least 26 Catholic schools did not reopen in NYC for the 2020 school year. The covid pandemic was the last straw in the continuing trend of decline in enrollment, financial support and religious participation. A product of Catholic education at its apex in the 50's and 60's and a devout Catholic, this was an enormous concern to Tom Konchalski

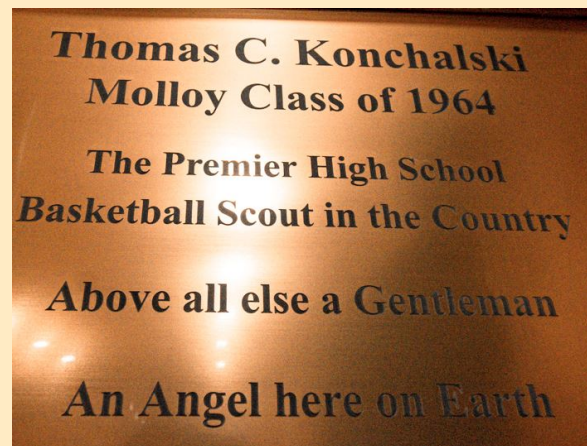

"Never before has a spiritual foundation been more important for an emerging generation. Our children face new and unprecedented challenges in an increasingly secular, competitive, and seemingly rudderless world. They must be given the tools to succeed professionally, but also to know right from wrong. Without the latter, material success would be meaningless." Timothy Cardinal Dolan

The good news is that many Catholic schools are experiencing post-pandemic growth. The dedicated faculty, coaches support staff and administration continue to provide a safe and superior educational experience. Our schools have innovated and adapted to the changing needs of their communities and students. Hopefully, this momentum will help retain students and attract new students in years to come.

With your support, the Thomas C Konchalski Foundation is committed to continue and increase its need-based scholarship awards to students of NYC Catholic schools. We also sponsor PSAL students of excellent character for overnight summer basketball camps.

"It would be almost impossible to count the number of players Konchalski helped over the years by matching them with the right level of college for a scholarship. If you added up all the scholarship dollars he accounted for, it might be impossible to count." - Coach Mike Krzyzewski
